Policy
Donors have the control over their solicitation and confidentiality setting. If a donor indicates that they prefer one form of communication over another or if they indicate that they want their gift or record marked confidential then their direction must be followed by all users and participants of Cadence.

Certain privacy laws across the United States and internationally impose penalties for violating certain directions that a donor may impose upon the holder of their data. For this reason and out of respect for all of the Clemson Enterprise constituents the codes included within this must be followed.

Exceptions to this policy may be approved by either the Clemson University Vice President of Development & Alumni Relations, Executive Director of Advancement Services of CUF or by the Legal Counsel of CUF. Such exception should be documented in the donor’s record. If this policy or accompanying procedure is violated it may result in the suspension of access to the database. The accompanying procedure details the solicit codes and confidentiality codes that are to be followed. The Procedure may be updated as needed but any updates must be submitted for review to the Executive Council of the Data Governance Council and approved by the CUF Senior Staff.
